Remembering Donald A.B. Lindberg, MD

The recently passed long-time director of the National Library of Medicine, Donald Lindberg will be remembered by many not just in the in the medical library and health informatics community but also everyone who is passionate about the power of information and knowledge to improve healthcare. He was an exceptional leader, a gentleman, and a scholar. A renaissance man, whose many and varied interests never ceased to amaze us. Dr. Lindberg commanded such respect and affection that speaks volumes about how very special a person he was. The FNLM offers our condolences to Mary Lindberg and the family.
